

note after the party had returned to Atlanta from Europe, and that upon Mr. Byfield's refusal to give up the note "they tore my coat and most of my shirt off me."

Mr. Candler could not be reached to confirm or deny this alleged meeting, but a man said to have been one of the party vigorously denied participation in or knowledge of the affair.

Mrs. Byfield Ill.
Mrs. Byfield's counsel Tuesday afternoon stated that her condition is "still precarious." She is ill at the Byfield apartments, 464 North Boulevard, where Attorney Rosser stated she underwent an operation Monday afternoon.

The nature of the operation was not disclosed, however, and details of the condition of the beautiful young woman were kept strictly secret.

Statements Confirmed.
Mr. Byfield's statement of the incidents on board the Berengaria differs in many instances from that given by Mr. Candler in his suit for injunction filed Monday by his attorneys, Reuben B. and Lowry Arnold. He disagrees with Mr. Candler regarding the alleged "champagne" party, by stating that all were "feeling good," but that none was so drunk as not to be fully conscious of his actions.

"That is where he and Mr. Candler disagreed," said Attorney Arnold. Regarding the financial arrangements for the European trip, Mr. Byfield asserts that Mr. Candler agreed to lend him the necessary money to make the trip. Mr. Byfield was given $500 at one time and $2,000 at another time by Mr. Candler before the party left Atlanta, Attorney Arnold said.

Were Ship Acquaintances.
The "married couple" referred to in Mr. Byfield's statement were merely "ship acquaintances," Mr. Arnold said, and his client does not know their present location, nor does he remember their names.

Following a reading of the Byfield reply to the papers filed in his suit, Mr. Candler issued a short statement declaring "many glaring misstatements occur in Byfield's card, but as this case is to be tried in court I will make no further statement."

Byfield and B. P. Gillespie, father of Mrs. Byfield, were in consultation with Attorney Rosser for an extended length of time Tuesday afternoon but no announcement was forthcoming following the session.

Byfield's Statement.
Mr. Byfield's letter follows:
"Editor Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.—Dear Sir: You publication of the suit of Walter T. Candler against myself demands that the truth be told, no matter who is thereby hurt. My wife and myself had been, as we thought, and had every reason to think, the warm personal friends of Walter Candler and his wife before their recent separation, and of Candler himself since that time. We visited and took meals at his home, and were shown the greatest kindness and highest respect by him, his wife and their children. We thought if we had any true friends, the Candler family were among them."

"After the separation Candler wanted to take a trip to Europe and take with him his two girls, one 11 years old and the other 9 years old. He urged my wife and myself to also go. He wanted us to go, not only for our own pleasure, but also for the help Mrs. Byfield would give in looking after and caring for his two girls. We finally succumbed to his persuasion and agreed to go."

Money From Bank.
"I was a customer of his bank, and as an inducement for us to make the trip he agreed that he or his bank would lend me what money I might lack to take the trip. Acting upon that agreement, I did not take the money necessary to meet expenses. That fact was understood and acquiesced in by Candler."

"We took ship at New York on July 11, the two girls having staterooms near that of my wife. On the trip my wife gave the girls that care and attention that any good woman would have given two motherless girls. On the night of the 16th, the night of the tragedy, she aided in giving medical treatment to one of the girls and aided both of them in retiring for the night."

"The 16th was our last night on the boat, and the usual jolly spirit was among all the passengers. A married couple (eminently respectable, as we then believed and as I now believe) invited my wife, myself, Candler and his two girls to a final dinner, which we all attended and of which all partook, and enjoyed. At the dinner champagne was served, of which we all, except the girls, partook in moderation."

"After the dinner the Candler girls, with the aid of Mrs. Byfield, were put to bed. The balance of the party went on deck and began taking part in the gaiety that usually occurs the last night on ship. Neither myself, my wife nor Candler became intoxicated—each of us was happy and in good humor, but all of us were in full possession of our faculties."

Finally my wife left the party, going to her stateroom, and I immediately followed her. After staying a while I returned to the party on deck, feeling that we had left rather abruptly, and the party might think, rudely. I stayed with the party a few minutes and then started for my stateroom. When on the stairs I was startled by the outcry of my wife. I sprang to the stateroom and opened the door. I saw Candler in a struggle with her; the bed covering was stripped from her and her night clothes were disheveled."

"I was unarmed; but with my naked hands I did my best to kill him. I lost all reason, all sense of right and justice, and, to my shame, forgetting that my wife's cries had called me to the room, I assailed my wife as well as Candler."

"The charge that when I entered the room I said: 'Now, I have got you and I have been suspecting this for six months; you must pay me $25,000, is infamously false and one which no man, except such as Candler, would make. I never had the least suspicion of Candler. I thought him a clean man. It never occurred to me that he would seek to defame the wife of his friend and the intimate companion of his wife and helpless, motherless female children."

Asked For Nothing.
"The turmoil in the hearing of his girls, brought some of the ship people and they stopped the fight, and my wife locked the stateroom against everybody. No one can apprehend my mental condition. I felt that my whole life had been destroyed. My wife, outraged at my assault, did not see me; I did not have a friend upon the ship or in France, where we were to land."

"I asked nothing of Candler. I was dazed, crushed and hopeless. I did not have enough money to meet the expense of the short, necessary delay in France before the journey home. I had expected to borrow from the man whose perfidy had just come to light. I was unused to foreign travel and did not even know how to get money from home, and, as it appeared to me, my wife and myself were about to be homeless and hungry in a strange city."

"In this dazed and helpless condition, Candler himself came, cringing and cowardly, and begged me to let him, as best he could, make amends for his worst to me. He reminded me that, as a result of the night's horror, my business would inevitably suffer, and that $25,000 would not be more than just compensation. He then made no denial or excuse for his conduct, but freely admitted it in the presence of one of the ship's inspectors. In an evil hour, dazed, hopeless and desperate, on the morning of the outrage I took a check for $25,000."

"Exonerating Letter Fake."
"Two days afterwards, in a hotel in Paris, the check was exchanged for notes and a certain sum of money, which enabled us to get home. At the same time, I signed the letter (absolutely false) exonerating Candler. There was no pretense by Candler or anyone else that the letter was the truth; he only wanted it in exchange for the notes and money and as a means of concealing his conduct on ship."

"It is easy to condemn me; indeed, I ought to be condemned for taking the check and afterwards making the exchange. But most of all, I condemn myself, and ought to be condemned by others, for signing the letter. But the circumstances under which I signed it ought not to be overlooked. I was induced by a man I thought my friend (but in fact a friend of Candler's) to visit a room in the hotel, in which I found Candler and two other men. All the papers, including the letter, were already prepared. The three men, called by Candler 'gamblers,' stood threateningly around me. I desperately needed the money to get out of Paris and back home. I was alone and had the greatest fear for the personal safety of myself and wife if I failed to sign. I felt that I must sign, and I signed."

"Clearly, in spite of my desperate plight, I ought to have spurned any settlement with this young money upstart, and ought to have taken vengeance. That would have ended, as to the Candler family, the stateroom friendship. But I did not do that, but went through the form of settling with and exonerating him, and for not doing so I am open to the gravest censure and blame."

"Plain Ugly Truth."
"This is the plain, ugly, naked truth. If it hurts me, I will take the hurt, and will bear it as courageously as I can. I was born and raised in this country. My father and mother, honest folks, were raised here before me. No wrong has ever been charged against either of us until I came, in an evil hour, in contact with Candler. But what about my girl wife? She is now only 21 years old. She has done no wrong; she had committed no indiscretion. She had no part or parcel in the check or note transaction. She has never advised or consented to it; she has given Candler no letter of exoneration. She has been assaulted, humiliated and shamed by this man. She has been ill ever since this dastardly outrage; is now in bed, and will likely remain so for days to come. No matter what about me—be protected by his boasted wealth, to go unwhipped by justice? Times are out of joint, but have we reached a stage where this man can assault a young girl and hold high financial positions?"

"His cry of blackmail is rather a familiar cry. It has been heard before; it will most likely be heard again. But while it is often done, it will not always deceive."

"Very respectfully,"
"C. K. BYFIELD."

acts which we are called upon to administer leave little discretion with the commission as to enforcement when violations come to light. In the continuance of our enforcement of the law we are taking steps and will be compelled to continue to proceed in a manner which must bring about serious withdrawals of motive power from service. Certain violations of the acts we report to the attorney-general for appropriate legal action. With a continuance of existing conditions, these will be increasing frequent."

To which President Harding replied:
"I have yours of even date (Tuesday, August 15) in which you call to my attention the progressive deterioration of motive power upon some of the important railroads runs of the country as the outgrowth of the prevailing strike. This growing menace to maintain transportation has been called to my attention unofficially in various ways."

"Under all the circumstances I know of nothing to be done except to insist upon the full enforcement of the law. It is a very natural thing under circumstances which exist at the present moment to waive the exactness in behalf of safety in seeking to maintain transportation. In my judgment it is better to have the service diminished rather than attempt the movement of trains on which safety is not assured so far as compliance with the law may provide it. I trust that your inspection forces will exert themselves to the utmost in order to be able to pass upon safe equipment, because the official sanction of the government will remove all questions of dispute."

May Use Troops.
The president is ready, if necessary, to place the operation of hard-pressed railroads under the protection of federal troops and to call upon the public for support in the railroads' effort to keep transportation going.

Such a course, because of the small size of the American "peace army," would necessitate either an increase in the army appropriation bill, permitting of augmented enlistments or a call for volunteer service in the interest of peace and protection along the rails. Estimates of the cost of furnishing supplies, pay and other necessities in such an emergency range as high as $500,000,000.

This might be reduced because, through settlement of the coal strike in some districts, national guardsmen on duty now, could be diverted to railroad protection.

Would Call On Strikers.
In connection with this course, the president would call upon all striking shopmen to return to work, as he called upon the miners when the coal strike negotiations were broken off. But, while all of this is in mind, the president will hope, up to thirty minutes before he goes before congress, that some other means save such action will be found to settle the present rail tie-up. His trip to congress is scheduled primarily to make a report on the situation growing out of the rail and coal strikes. "What, if any, recommendations he makes for legislation, it was officially stated at the white house Tuesday, have not been decided upon and won't be, pending developments between now and then."

The entire cabinet meeting Tuesday was devoted to discussion of the industrial situation. Senators Watson, Indiana, and Kellogg, Minnesota, and Speaker Gillette called at the white house before the meeting and went away with no idea of what might be expected from the executive. Late in the afternoon the president conferred with Secretary of War Davis, Chairman McChord, of the interstate commerce commission, and Chairman Hooper, of the railway labor board.

One thing is certain. The president is determined to avoid if humanly possible, the taking over of the railroads. "The roads would be seized Tuesday as an extreme last emergency effort," said one cabinet officer. "Such an emergency is not at hand."

Considerably short of actual seizure of the roads would be the plan now being formulated for federal and state troop protection of the lines, but, because the president is strongly on record against the use of compulsion and, further, because of the enormous expense that would be involved in such a military undertaking, he is almost as opposed to this program as he is to seizure of the lines.

SOUTHERN REMAINS IDEAL AT MACON.
Macon, Ga., August 15.—(Special.) Although a statement was issued yesterday by President Fairfax Harrison, of the Southern railway, to the effect that the road would proceed at once to fill vacancies in its shops, no more to that end was made at the Macon shops today.

A number of persons inquired at the different offices at the terminal station during today as to how to secure employment with the Southern. The only office they found open, however, was the one operated by the Central of Georgia railway, where it was learned that some of the former employees have been taken back into the service. One of them is said to be the oldest machinist the company had in its employ at the time the strike was called.

Fifty-six per cent of the normal shop force of the Central of Georgia railroad is now at work, according to figures given out by that company today.

SOUTHERN BEGINS HIRING NEW MEN.
Asheville, N. C., August 15.—The Southern railway today began hiring men to fill the places of striking shop employees, according to a statement received from Henry W. Miller, vice president in charge of operation. The statement continued that effective county indicate that the boll weevil has not seriously affected the cotton crop in that district. A large number of planters in that locality have followed the directions of the government agents, and the crops of these men compare favorably with crops of five years ago.

Wednesday morning the Southern will begin advertising for men who are qualified to fill positions open as a result of the strike of shopmen.

The stalk is well developed and well fruited. None of the bolls show the presence of the weevil. A large crop is expected.

GOVERNOR APPROVES PEACH COUNTY BILL

Governor Hardwick signed the bill Tuesday to create Peach county, which passed the senate at the 1921 session and passed the house last Friday.

The bill, being a constitutional amendment, like all other new county bills, will go to the people for ratification. If passed, the county will come into existence January 1, 1923. The Fort Valley delegation expressed the utmost confidence that it will pass; and plans have already begun to build a court house, a jail and otherwise to constitute a new county organization.

The signing of the bill was witnessed by Senator Davidson, of the twenty-third district, who piloted the bill through the senate; Representative Houser, of Houston, who piloted the bill through the house; H. C. Neil, former mayor of Fort Valley, the county seat of the proposed new county, and a very active worker in behalf of the bill, and Charles H. Jackson, of Byron, a town in the proposed new county.

Wear and Tear on Cement Machinery Costly

Machinery used in the manufacture of portland cement wears out faster than in most industries.

Mechanical equipment has to be replaced on an average, once every ten years.

Firebrick lining in that part of the rotary kiln where the raw materials are burned at nearly 3000 degrees Fahrenheit, has to be renewed about twice a year.

To prevent long and expensive shut-downs, spare parts for practically every piece of machinery must be kept in stock. In addition, most mills maintain complete machine and blacksmith shops.

For every million dollars invested in the cement plant proper, from $75,000 to $100,000 worth of spare parts must be on hand.

One company's inventory of spare parts runs as high as $1,000,000. Interest must be earned on this big investment.

Capital requirements of the cement industry are large.

Turnover is slow—with some companies only once every two years.

Mrs. Greer, 70, Takes Free Hand In Police Court

Legal rules of court procedure and evidence all meant nothing in the life of Mrs. Eliza Greer, 70, of 482 Whitehall street, who Tuesday afternoon bested Attorney Paul L. Lindsay as she prosecuted her clients, W. L. Riley and his wife, before Recorder George E. Johnson, under disorderly conduct charges.

Efforts of Judge Johnson to be heard during the argument of Mrs. Greer were frustrated and he was silenced by the waving of her hand as she addressed him in the terms of "Son" and "My dear."

The Rileys were arrested following an alleged attack they both are said to have made upon Miss Mildred Pelfrey, who has a room in Mrs. Greer's home. The Rileys were former roomers there, and the alleged attack occurred, it was testified, in the Rileys' room.

Mrs. Greer defended Miss Pelfrey, stating she was jerked into Mrs. Riley's room by the latter, and that she was struck several blows by both Mrs. Riley and her husband. This all happened, according to Mrs. Greer, in front of her own eyes, and she testified to many things, over the objections of Attorney Lindsay, that were reported to her by others.

At one juncture of the proceedings Mrs. Greer called upon Clerk A. W. Calloway of the recorder's court to testify as to Miss Pelfrey's good character. "Son," she addressed Mr. Calloway, "tell Judge Johnson what you know of Miss Pelfrey."

The court room was kept in an uproar of laughter by hundreds of spectators, who left their seats outside of the railing and crowded around the judge's rostrum to witness Mrs. Greer in action.

Mrs. Pelfrey and Mrs. Greer both agreed that it would be satisfactory for Mr. and Mrs. Riley to be fined in the police court and not bound over to the state court under a charge of assault and battery; whereupon, they were fined $6 each by the recorder.

The suit was filed through Attorneys Etheridge, Sams & Etheridge.

ONE OF BANDIT TRIO BELIEVED CAPTURED

That Homer Burge, alias Robert Findley, 19, said to be an escaped convict, is one of three bandits that have been terrorizing Atlanta with recent burglaries, holdups and other forms of robbery, was the belief Tuesday expressed by City Detectives George E. Holley and E. P. Meek, detailed to grill the prisoner and probe his record after his capture Tuesday.

Burge, alias Findley, was apprehended early Tuesday morning by Call Officers Otis Howell and John B. Woods, after an exciting automobile chase, punctuated with an exchange of shots between the police and the car they were chasing, which is said to have contained three men.

After a chase of many blocks the automobile was finally wrecked at Kennedy and Chestnut streets against a street car. Burge, alias Findley, who was badly shaken up, was arrested before he could untangle himself from the wreckage, while one of his companions, who had a deep and serious scalp wound, made his escape as officers went to summon the ambulance from the Grady hospital. The third man probably was uninjured, as no trace could be found of him by the police.

Detectives Holley and Meek learned yesterday morning the identity of the man that sustained the serious wound on his head and made two visits to his home to arrest him. They found the premises void of occupants, but secured clues as to his present whereabouts, and it was thought he would be jailed during last night or Wednesday morning.

The investigation yesterday morning by Officers Holley and Meek disclosed that Burge, alias Findley, is an escaped convict, and that there is a reward of $50 for his arrest. They declined to state from what penitentiary he escaped, stating full information would be given out Wednesday. He gave his residence as 727 Marietta street.

The automobile that Burge, alias Findley, and his two companions were driving at the time of their arrest, is said by detectives to have been stolen from J. Harvey Trippie, 572 North Jackson street.

The officers were summoned by Police Commissioner Ellis Barrett, who observed the car and the occupants moving about suspiciously. As the police car approached the driver started at a break-neck gait and continued running at high speed until he collided with the street car. Both of his companions, the officers allege, began shooting back at them. Officer John Woods returned the fire while Officer Howell was trying to make the police car overtake the pursued machine.

Proof against vibration is a new clock for airplanes and balloons that is kept wound by electricity from a small storage battery.

INJURED BY TRAIN, IS ASKING $10,000

For personal injuries alleged to have been sustained on October 30, 1921, when his automobile was struck by a passenger train at Bryan avenue, in East Point, $10,000 damages is sought in a suit filed in Fulton superior court Tuesday by D. V. Kiehl against the Atlanta and West Point railway.

Kiehl alleges that he stopped his machine to permit a switch engine to pass and that he was not warned of the approach of a passenger train. He was in the hospital three weeks as a result, he said, and his car was badly damaged.

The suit was filed through Attorneys Etheridge, Sams & Etheridge.

CANADA CUTS PAY OF RAIL SHOPMEN

Montreal, August 15.—Canadian railways today cut the semi-monthly wages of their shopmen about $200,000 although 37,000 workers had threatened to strike if the action was taken before the board of conciliation had decided the dispute.

school, a lot, measuring 445 feet on Peoples; 380 on Lawton; 780 Peoples; and 380 feet on an alley running through the middle of the block, for $50,000.

All of these sites were approved by the board of education and following favorable action of the bond commission will go to council for ultimate acceptance.

A letter from Frank Inman, chairman of the school committee of the bond commission, recommending selection of the Joe Brown property, which measures 400 feet square on Washington, Rawson, Pulliam streets and Woodward avenue, as a site for the girls' senior high school, and abandoning the plan to condemn 10 acres on the north end of Grant park as the site, was read before the commission, Mr. Inman being out of the city.

Would Cost $150,000.

This property embraces the old home of Governor Joseph M. Brown and property owned by his son, Julian Brown, immediately adjacent and can be purchased, according to the lot consists of $27 acres.

Mr. Inman, for the purpose of $150,000, "I think it would be an excellent site for the girls' senior high school," Mr. Inman stated in his communication, "both from a consideration of its location and accessibility. We can secure this property for $150,000, which to my mind is a very reasonable figure, and I believe the location would prove satisfactory to at least 75 per cent of the people of Atlanta."

Before adjourning the commission concurred in letting contracts for the Lucile avenue, East Atlanta and Englewood avenue schools, which were awarded Monday by the board of education following approval by A. Ten Eyck Brown, supervising architect.

anthracite operators and union officials has been postponed. Union officials here believe, however, that peace in the anthracite fields will follow rapidly.

WILL MEET FARRINGTON.

St. Louis, August 15.—The coal operators of the fifth and ninth Illinois districts will meet in a joint district wage conference with Frank Farrington, head of the Illinois union miners, and the executive board at Chicago next Friday. The meeting was made possible late this afternoon when W. D. Kavanaugh, head of the operators' association of the two districts, accepted an invitation from Farrington suggesting the joint wage conference.

ANTHRACITE PARLEY DELAYED ONE DAY.

Philadelphia, August 15.—Postponement of the joint wage conference of anthracite coal operators and representatives of the mine workers until 2 p. m., Thursday was announced today by Samuel D. Warriner, head of the operators' negotiating committee. The meeting which had been set for tomorrow, was delayed at the request of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, who telegraphed Mr. Warriner that the presence of the union officials was required in Cleveland another day in connection with the soft coal settlement.

It had been expected that the Philadelphia conference would be left in the hands of Philip Murray, international vice president of the mine workers, and the three district presidents of the anthracite field, William J. Brennan, Thomas Kennedy and C. J. Golden, but the postponement, it was stated, probably would make it impossible for Mr. Lewis to attend.

Confident prediction was made by both sides that the conference would result in an early settlement of the hard coal strike.

Atlanta Chapter Demolay Order Receives Charter

Atlanta Chapter, Order of the Moose, conferred the initiatory degree last night on a class of twenty-five boys, ranging in ages from 16 to 21, at a regular meeting held in the Scottish Rite apartments of Masonic temple, and the work was highly praised by master Masons who were present in large numbers as guests of the chapter.

Forrest Adair, who was recently appointed deputy of the grand master councilor for the state of Georgia, complimented the degree staff on its excellent work and formally presented the chapter with its charter. He also announced that arrangements had been made for the formation of a chapter of the order at Columbus, Ga., and that the degree staff of Atlanta chapter had been selected to institute the Columbus chapter.

The members of the executive committee of the Scottish Rite bodies of Atlanta attended the meeting in a body and were formally introduced as representatives of the Masonic organization which stands sponsor for the Atlanta chapter. Dr. David Marx, 33rd degree, spoke on behalf of the executive committee, and while his remarks were of an informal nature, he delivered an impressive lecture on the degree that was conferred. The present class will receive the Demolay degree on August 29.

U. S. INJUNCTION LIMITS PICKETS

Judge Samuel H. Sibley issued Tuesday, another injunction, similar to the one issued several weeks ago, which restrains striking shopmen from placing more than two pickets at any one point and which restrained both strikers and employees from acts of violence.

The new injunction was issued on the petition of the Louisville and Nashville and the Atlantic Coast Line railways, as lessees of the Georgia railroad, and the Atlanta and West Point railroads. The first injunction, applied to Western and Atlantic, the S. A. L. and the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis.

Judge Sibley stated that the injunction, although it would be applied in all important respects as the previous one, would allow the placing of pickets nearer together. This was a more greatly congested area than any affected by the other injunction.

The hearing Tuesday, was on the petition for a temporary restraining order and Judge Sibley has set August 24 as the date for the defendant shop unions and employees to appear and show cause why he should not grant a permanent injunction.

FAIL IN ATTEMPTED MOVIE SAFE ROBBERY

Burglars Tuesday night at 9 o'clock boldly entered the offices of the S. A. Lynch enterprises on the top floor of the Howard theater building and, bringing hammers and chisels into play against the door of a safe, played an "unlucky chorus" of their own while hundreds listened to the orchestra in the Howard theater on the first floor.

J. W. McClain, watchman of the building, discovered the seegs just as they had chiseled off the combination of the safe and had almost removed the steel door. As he approached they fled without a hit.

Officials of the concern stated that approximately $1,000 was stored in the safe. Detectives were assigned to investigate.

ENGINE SEVERS LEG OF AGED CONDUCTOR

Robert H. West, a yard conductor for the Southern railway living at 169 Jones avenue, was at Davis-Fischer sanitarium Tuesday night in a critical condition following the loss of one leg about 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, when a switch engine ran over him.

West was struck and run over at the southern end of the Terminal station by an engine in charge of Hostler "Dad" Wilkie. Officials of the road stated that West did not see the approaching engine.

One leg was severed, and it was thought that his other limb would have to be amputated. West is said to be about 65 years of age, and is a veteran railroad man.

PIONEER SCHOOL BOY TO BE GUEST OF HIS COMRADES

James L. Logan, president of the Pioneer School Boys' club, has called a meeting of the executive committee Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock in room 819 of the Atlanta Trust company building. The object of the meeting is to discuss plans for an entertainment in honor of William H. Brenner, who recently returned to this city for a visit after residing in Spain for nine years.

The Pioneer School Boys' club is the only one of its kind in the United States, and has a membership of over 300. The ages of the members range from 8 to 18 years.

contention that they can handle the situation despite the strike, and that condition of their equipment is steadily improving, both sides will be satisfied. If that report confirms their fears, supported by reports of shopmen's leaders, brotherhood spokesmen and maintenance of way chiefs, they will insist that Harding lay the situation before the people and, with assurances of public support, demand that the rail executives accept his original terms of compromise settlement already accepted by the shopmen, and save the country from threatened industrial collapse.

Report Expected Soon.

This report is expected within the next week.

Meantime, with the house back on the job, party leaders believed Harding would adopt a policy of watchful waiting.

"There is nothing for the president to do at present but watch developments," said Senator Cummins, chairman of the senate commerce committee, and joint author of the Esch-Cummins railroad law. "So far as I know, and I am in constant touch with him, no immediate legislative action is contemplated. I am reasonably certain that seizure of the railroads is not being considered yet."

LITTLE GIRL CHARGES MAN WRONGED HER

On charges of improper conduct, brought by a 12-year-old girl, S. F. Brown, 20, of 45 Crew street, was Tuesday evening bound over to the superior court for a statutory offense by Recorder George E. Johnson, his bond being fixed at $2,000.

His commitment to the superior court followed the pitiful story told by a little 12-year-old girl, who accused the defendant of making her many promises before he wronged her, among them being the purchase of fine clothing, shoes, kodaks, etc., and to take her away from her mother after two years.

The mother, a widow, told of receiving Brown into the house with herself and little daughter, having confidence in him and never suspecting him of betraying her friendship and trust. She testified that she did not know anything about the alleged wrong until Brown's arrest Tuesday evening by Policemen Mrs. J. C. Davis and Mrs. McDonough.

According to the policemen, who conducted the prosecution, they first received their information from a next-door neighbor, to whom the child had confided, fearing to let her mother know of it. The girl was then questioned by the officers after which the mother was notified.

During her recital of the circumstances, the alleged victim sobbed aloud, and had to pause several times.

The defendant made no statement, nor introduced any evidence.

MOTHER FORGIVES ELOPING YOUTHS AND IS FORGIVEN

Happiness reigned supreme Tuesday morning in police court as Recorder George E. Johnson dismissed the disorderly conduct charge against Mrs. Laura Miller, of 48 Hill street, whose objection to the marriage of her daughter, Miss Ruby Miller, to Earl Humphrey, of 88 South avenue, caused her to create such a scene last Sunday night as to bring about her arrest.

Mrs. Miller, through her attorney, C. G. Battle, announced her decision to forgive the couple and willingness to receive their forgiveness, bestowing upon them her parental blessings and wishing for them a long and happy life, in which the court joined.

KNOCKED FROM STEP, SUES CAR COMPANY

Suit for $10,000 damages was filed in Fulton superior court Tuesday by George Bailey, a minor, against the Georgia Railway and Power company and H. R. Williams, as a result of an automobile accident in which the automobile of Williams is said to have knocked Bailey from the rear step of a moving trolley car. The suit was filed by Attorneys Parker and Patterson.

The suit alleges that in July, 1920, Bailey boarded a trolley car at Campbellton road to go to East Point, and that owing to the crowded condition of the passengers he was forced to ride on the rear step.

Williams' machine struck him and knocked him from the step, he declares. He held on to the trolley and was dragged for about 75 yards, he says. Five toes were broken, and other injuries were sustained, he alleges.

LOCAL UNIONS BOOST SCHOOLS' CAMPAIGN

The Atlanta Federation of Trades will hold a special meeting September 8 in the interest of "education week" in Atlanta September 4 to 11, planned as a stimulus to prompt attendance in the schools Monday, September 11.

Civic clubs, parent-teacher organizations and individuals are taking a hand in the plans for the week, and have endorsed the movement in various ways. Mayor Key has issued a proclamation concerning the movement, in which he calls upon the civic organizations, committee on church co-operation, Boy Scouts and others to aid in the project.

As a result of the mayor's proclamation, the Atlanta Federation of Trades at a meeting Tuesday adopted the following resolutions, in which it heartily endorses "education week."

"Whereas, the board of education has sponsored this means of putting before the people a complete record of the accomplishments of the public school system of Atlanta, wherein it relates to the advantages made and the opportunities it affords not only to the boy and girl of school age, but to the boy and girl in industry, for further education; therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Atlanta Federation of Trades do heartily endorse this proclamation of the mayor and the action of the board of education; and be it further

"Resolved, That the Atlanta Federation of Trades hold a special open meeting on Friday, September 8, and invite Superintendent W. A. Sutton to deliver an address before the meeting; and be it further

"Resolved, That this entire subject be referred to the educational committee for them to give the widest possible publicity and handle all necessary arrangements for the proposed meeting; and be it further

"Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the board of education and Superintendent W. A. Sutton."

WHISKY FIGURES IN DIVORCE SUIT

Charges that her husband had not only become a habitual drunkard but had made whisky for himself and others were made in a divorce petition filed in superior court Tuesday by Mrs. Madge I. Williamson against A. G. Williamson.

Mrs. Williamson says their marriage occurred in West Point, Ga., in 1906, and that the separation took place on April 2, 1921. She asked a total divorce and the custody of two children. She was represented by Attorney W. J. Laney.

Negro Is Assaulted.

Detectives Tuesday were probing the alleged attack on Daniel Redan, negro, at the corner of Glenn and McDaniel streets by four unidentified white men. The negro was badly beaten up and injured and had to be carried to the Grady hospital for treatment. He stated he did not know who his assailants were, nor why they attacked him.

To this quotation from one of Babson's recent circulars:

INVEST AT HOME

"The field farthest away always looks the greenest". This especially applies to investments. People are continually sending their money to places like Czechoslovakia when there are better purchases in their own home town. Not only is the security usually greater with local investments, but the opportunity for profit is often fully as good. Look over the names of the wealthy men in any community. You will find that the ones who have made money are not those who have sent it to distant states or countries, but those who have invested it in their own country or own home towns. There are three rules for successful investing: (1) Study fundamental conditions; (2) Put character before collateral; (3) Have faith in your own community."

That's the same kind of doctrine we have been talking for a long time concerning our home manufacturers. BUY AT HOME—buy home-made goods—is just as important as INVEST AT HOME.

"This Nation's Growth Is Due To The Railroads"

—Said The Late Franklin K. Lane

"This country cannot grow without adequate transportation facilities. The railroad is our common highroad; it is not a concern in which the farmer and the manufacturer alone are interested; it is an essential to the commercial life of our people, almost as necessary as the land itself, for we have grown up as a people to be physically dependent upon our railroads. No other people are so bound up as we in economic inter-dependence. No one community in all this land lives to itself. We have grown as railroads were built. We have made a community of a continent."

"The part the L. & N. has played in the upbuilding of the central South is plainly demonstrated by the increase in land values, the population growth of the cities it serves, and particularly the development of the mineral resources and industrial enterprises adjacent to its line of road."

BORAH AND THE BONUS.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, who has rendered a distinct public service if he succeeds in his announced intention to prevent, if possible, the passage of the soldier bonus bill in the shape in which it is now being considered by the senate.

The bill, which contemplates a dip into the federal treasury to the tune of something like $5,000,000, 000, passed the house several months ago and has been hanging fire in the senate since that time.

Under an unanimous consent agreement the tariff bill probably will be disposed of this week, and the bonus measure is next in line for consideration.

Despite the fact that the president has strongly intimated his intention to veto the bill, if it reaches his desk, on the ground that it makes no provision for meeting the expenditures for which it provides, many of the senators who are candidates for re-election will probably vote for it as a bait for soldier votes; and for that reason there is danger that it may pass.

Under the leadership of the Idaho senator, however, opponents of the bill are said to be preparing to denounce it "in the bitterest terms" as a "treasury raid," pure and simple, and as a measure to impose "an unparalleled burden upon the American taxpayer; and they are organizing their forces to "fight it to the last ditch."

As Senator Borah said in a statement to Washington newspaper correspondents the other day—

"It seems incredible in view of the business and industrial conditions of the country that such a program would be considered by men charged with the responsibility of directing public affairs in a crisis like that which confronts us at this particular time."

Calling attention to the peril that confronts the rank and file of the people this fall and winter by reason of the coal and rail strikes the senator truthfully said:

"In the face of these conditions for congress to deliberately add an indebtedness or obligation of the government, ranging all the way from four or four and a half to five billion dollars, is a reckless and shameless disregard of those whom we are to protect. The distressing effect upon business, upon industry, upon labor, upon the cost of living, and quite as important, the psychological effect, will feel, and have a right to feel, that the government at Washington has no appreciation of the burden which they are carrying, and of the terrific situation which confronts them."

He concluded his formal statement with the assertion that—

"If the party in power forces through this program it will forfeit and rightfully forfeit the respect and confidence of the American people. It will amount to complete disregard of the seriousness of the situation now apparent to every man who has heart enough to sympathize and brains enough to comprehend. The republican party cannot afford to test the situation any further."

For that matter, neither party nor any senator, regardless of party affiliations, can "afford to test this situation any further," and if the measure should be passed by democratic votes they would be equally culpable with the republican sponsors of the bill.

The principle of soldiers' relief and of adequately compensating the brave young patriots who lost limb, or health, or life in the service, is one thing; that of saddling the people with additional tax burdens which they are unable to bear, and at a time when the efforts of our law-makers should be directed to ward lightening instead of heightening the financial strain upon the country, is quite another.

Senator Borah's attitude will be approved by the sentiment of a majority of the American people.

SCHOOL SAVINGS.

Practical instruction in thrift is, perhaps, the most important recent development in the education of children. Cities, counties and states are rapidly adopting school savings plans. The Constitution recently pointed out the splendid results attained in the West Virginia schools in a short six months' period.

Los Angeles has just adopted a school savings plan along somewhat different lines, claiming it eliminates some of the faults of other systems. Los Angeles says its plan has lowered the expense of installing and maintaining the system, that the detail work required of teachers has been reduced and simplified and that the pupils are taught to transact their business direct with the banks.

Instead of teachers making daily sales of 5-cent stamps which pupils paste in their bank books, as in West Virginia, the Los Angeles teachers provide each school child with a home safe holding coins of every denomination and periodical literature among them thrift literature supplied by the banks.

When the pupil gets a dollar or more in his safe he takes it to any bank—a member of the school savings association—which he may select, and starts his savings account or adds to what he already has on deposit.

The "home safe" plan is not new, even to the school children of Los Angeles, some 20,000 of whom are said to be already using it. In fact every progressive bank in the country uses the home safe to aid and attract depositors and to increase its savings deposits. The new feature of it is the distribution of a uniform home safe through the public schools, and, incidentally, such instruction as the teacher may see fit to give along with the savings literature distributed among the children.

This eliminates, in a measure, the element of class competition which, as has been found in West Virginia, has proven an important factor in building school savings. Whether the other advantages claimed will make up for a loss of that kind must be determined by experience.

The West Virginia school child transacts much of his business, too, direct with the bank; for, instead of carrying in his home safe with the actual cash, he takes his page of 5-cent stamps, worth when full $1, endorses it and is credited with the deposit in his pass book. Through purchase of stamps and teacher talk he gets banking instruction in the school room as well as a knowledge of banking methods from his periodic visits to his bank for the purpose of making deposits.

Thus there are advantages claimed for both plans, and there are still other plans. But the main point is not so much one of a particular method as it is of getting a start in school thrift under any plan which appears best to meet the needs and convenience of the community. It is simple enough to adopt new features as they are developed and to make improvements along with progress.

No more important or valuable instruction could possibly be compressed into the five or ten minutes required daily than that which relates to practical thrift. Lives have often been wrecked through lack of knowledge and experience with finance and thrift; and in any event, the school thrift system will mean a community of better business men and women when the occasion arises for them to render business service.

Every community in the state should have its school thrift and savings plan in operation. Progressive school boards everywhere will, undoubtedly, seize upon and adopt an idea that is so full of possibilities. It is an easy matter to obtain the information necessary to the installation of a system. The banks everywhere will be glad to co-operate, even though the handling of small accounts is often an expense, for it means future business building for the bank just as it means future happiness and greater strength of character for the child who learns the value and advantage of systematic thrift.

Remember the old-time wood-fire in the days of the coal strike, and sharpen your ax for the depletion of the unfortunate forests.

Evermore going away!

The Happy Ground.

We're mighty happy, here at home—

We hold the happy ground:

Though troubles rise

There's joy to pass around.

With toil that makes the joy of life,

That brings the peace and rest,

And love to light

The darkest night

The heart of home is blest.

Joy meets us—greet us on the road

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution.)

HOW MEASLES SPREADS.

The granules still imagine as actively as ever about measles and scarlet fever. The unenlightened mother still worries as much as ever about the "rash striking in" and causing some dire result. Some health officers and school medical inspectors still pursue the same old tactics as ever in "controlling" these diseases. There are hundreds of public schools in cities in many parts of the country where children are deliberately admitted to school while in the most contagious or infectious stage of measles or scarlet fever. And yet the health authorities and the school medical inspectors are supposed to be "guarding" children from exposure to disease.

Measles is most communicable in the period of three or four days before the rash appears. Infants are particularly susceptible. Infants are most communicable in the period of perhaps six days prior to development of the rash and the several days, perhaps 10 days of the acute attack. Both measles and scarlet fever are spread practically exclusively through discharges from the nose and throat, and therefore both are the most dangerous to susceptible children in the period when the victim is supposed to have "just a cold" or a "slight sore throat."

Health officers and school medical inspectors know that this is true, but haven't the moral courage, in many instances, to insist on isolation of every child presenting symptoms of "slight cold."

The better schools do exclude every child who comes to school with a running nose, cough or sore throat, but such potentially dangerous diseases are permitted to run rampant through many a school room because health supervision is so lax.

The difficulty seems to be that the American people like to imagine they can purchase competent health protection for a price which wouldn't buy the services of an ordinary doctor, let alone a trained health expert.

Measles doesn't "strike in" any more than infantile paralysis or diphtheria does. The notion that the child is "contracting" the rash from a reverse logic, the truth is that there is no such fading of the rash except as a result of consequence of some grave complication developing in the course of measles. The rash fades only as the effect of a failing circulation, not as a cause of any untoward event. So when the measles frictions are given with a rash of the "rash striking in" the only proper treatment is to give the patient. The rash may be caused to disappear at any time by pressure of the finger on the skin, and this shows that the rash depends on the circulation.

Measles is not spread through the rash. Neither is scarlet fever spread through the peeling of the skin. The virus of both diseases is spread through the discharges from nose and throat, and exclusively, possibly in rare cases through the discharge from bowel and kidneys.

Measles, scarlet fever and infantile paralysis are just three of the possible denunciations of an alleged "cold," and it is well to think of these risks whenever you are exposed to an open face success or unsmiling count.

And This Is the 50th Day

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON

This is the fiftieth day of the majority of a quorum—a majority of those voting above a quorum—to sustain or overrule.

There were 25 of the 51 senators who recently voted to repeal the tax equalization law, the vote lacking only one of the required constitutional majority of 25.

It would thus appear, therefore, that the repeal bill, coming to the senate from the house, could have a fair chance of finding itself again on the senate calendar for passage.

That, however, is not probable. There are several members of the senate who voted for the repeal bill, just as did Senator Clay, the president, who will take the position that the ruling is a correct interpretation of the constitution, and that, however much they would like to see the equalization law repealed, they cannot and will not vote in violation of their own interpretations of the organic law of the state.

Other good lawyers in the senate who are advocates of the repeal bill will argue that the constitutional rule does not apply in this case, hinging the argument on the word "proposed" as is used in the rule.

They will be just as sincere in their contention, but—

It is not probable the repeal bill will find any place in court again at this session.

The senate will put the road bond bill—calling for a three-year program, $3,000,000 a year—on its passage again today, having reconsidered its action of Monday in defeating the bill. When the bill gets to the house, if passed by the senate, a motion will be made to substitute the Perryman certificate bill, which has been favorably reported by the house constitutional amendment committee.

It seems probable that the bill will now pass the senate, as a failure to do so will very probably destroy all chances of legislation at this time to match the federal aid and continue the state-wide highway program that has already been undertaken.

The reason for this is that the rules committee of the house has not as yet placed the Perryman bill on the calendar, expecting the senate bill to come over from that branch.

Any failure, therefore, of the senate bill to pass means that the state-wide highway program of legislation will get caught in the jam, and possibly be sacrificed.

This is too important a matter—too constructive a program to let it suffer from legislative inactivity in any such manner.

The people of Georgia do not want to see the development of highways cease, nor do they want to lose the federal aid allocated to the state.

It is unfortunate that so constructive an undertaking should be subjected to political intrigues and prejudices; and if this assembly does not do something fair and reasonable to ward continuing the state road program there is little doubt that the whole thing will become an issue in the local elections this fall.

The double taxation bill that has passed the house—the bill that proposes that both an income tax and a property tax shall be imposed at the same time, and heavy—will also come up in the senate today, if it can be reached.

This bill has already passed the house, with amendments stipulating only some exemptions, which were made the same as in the federal law. It is not probable the bill will pass the senate; certainly it will not pass without an amendment curing, as far as practicable under a dual system, the objectionable feature of double taxation.

There is a strong sentiment in the senate against any income tax, and particularly against the state imposing both an income and an ad valorem tax upon the same individual.

Therefore, the house bill is not likely to pass.

The federal government imposes an income tax, and nearly every one is familiar with it and its tentacles as they fasten themselves upon

PROGRAM IS GIVEN FOR LEGISLATORS

Miss Allen, Mr. Leffingwell, Signor Volpi and Steinway Duo-Art Are Featured.

Ten numbers of some of the best music ever heard from Station WGM. The Atlanta Constitution, were presented between 1 and 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, especially for members of the Georgia legislature.

Artists appearing on the program to the legislators yesterday afternoon were Miss Nora Allen, soprano, former member of the Chicago grand opera company; Professor W. W. Leffingwell, director of the Leffingwell violin school, and Signor E. Volpi, Atlanta opera coach. Supplementing the program by these artists were two solos as presented on the Steinway Duo-Art reproducing piano through the courtesy of Phillips & Crew, Atlanta. The Steinway instrument was used for arrangements which were played by Signor Volpi.

Ten Numbers Given.

Four numbers were sung by Miss Allen while Mr. Leffingwell played four selections and a violin obligato for one of Miss Allen's numbers. The Steinway Duo-Art piano was obtained by The Constitution especially for the program yesterday afternoon but will be used frequently in the programs to be given in the future from Station WGM.

Phillips & Crew is the oldest musical house in the south, and arranged the opening program with the Steinway Duo-Art especially for the legislators. The instrument is the finest of its kind used in any broadcasting station in the south.

Opening the program was a soprano solo, "Song of the Soul," by Miss Allen. She sang this number to perfection, although it was hardly better than her other numbers, which were given in truly remarkable manner.

The second number was a violin solo by Mr. Leffingwell, "Cavatina" by Raffi, a difficult number in which he appeared at his best. For the Duo-Art was used in presenting MacDowell's pretty composition, "To a Wild Rose." The record for the solo was made by Renee Florjanc.

The other numbers were as follows: "Love's Lullaby," by Miss Allen; "Berceuse" from "Jocelyn," by Mr. Leffingwell; "Song of Love," by the Steinway Duo-Art reproducing piano; "The Rosary," by Miss Allen with violin obligato by Mr. Leffingwell; "Mazurka," by Weinowski, by Mr. Leffingwell; "The Perfume of the Flowers," by Miss Allen and "Salut d'Amour" by Elgar by Mr. Leffingwell.

At the state capitol Constitution receiving equipment in the office of the secretary of the senate and was so tuned that the music was heard throughout the second floor of the building.

FIFTEEN MINUTES OF RADIO EACH DAY

Lesson No. 122.
Radio Dictionary.

Super-Heterodyne—A method of amplification which provides the important advantage of high selectivity between received oscillations, the frequencies of which differ but slightly. In this system of reception a local oscillation is combined with the received oscillation and "beats" are produced which have a frequency above audibility but below the frequency of the received signal. Amplification of the best oscillations eliminates many of the unsatisfactory results of either radio-frequency or audio-frequency amplification.

"Spider Web" Coils—Small coils, the construction of which resembles a spider web. These coils have a high inductance value, low distributive capacity between turns and are very efficient. Three of these coils are commonly used for the primary, secondary and tickler coils in a regenerative circuit.

"Hot Wire" Ammeter—An instrument suitable for measuring current at radio frequencies. The expansion of a wire, in this device, due to current flow causes a pointer to move over a scale and indicate the value of the current.

"Clean" Tubes—A type of detector tube, also commonly known as gas tubes, due to the fact that they contain a small amount of gas which renders them more sensitive and consequently more suitable for detectors than tubes which are more highly evacuated. Tubes having a high vacuum are commonly known as "hard" tubes and are more suitable as amplifiers.

Kenotron—A two-electrode tube, having a plate and filament. This type of tube has an exceedingly high vacuum and is used principally as a rectifier of high voltage alternating currents.

Coulomb—The amount of electricity which passes in one second through a circuit in which the strength of the current is one ampere.

Woods Metal—A soft metallic compound which fuses at very low temperature and is commonly used for supporting in small cups the various types of mineral crystals which are used as detectors.

"Close" Coupling—In an inductively coupled tuner, if the secondary coil is placed as near as possible to the primary coil in order to obtain the greatest transfer of energy, the coupling is said to be "close," in contrast to "loose" coupling which consists in moving the secondary coil away from the primary coil.

Ionization—A condition which exists in a vacuum tube containing an appreciable amount of gas, when an excessive plate voltage is applied to the tube. This condition is evidenced by a pale blue glow in the tube and the tube will not properly detect signals.

Carborundum—A crystal which has the property of rectifying currents of radio-frequency. It is a product of the electric furnace and is composed of coke, sand, sawdust and salt. When used with a potentiometer and local battery it is very sensitive for purposes of detection and has the important property of remaining in adjustment for a considerable period, due to the hard surface and firm method of support.

LISTENING IN

The use of radio in mine rescue work has been suggested and it is probable that this method would assist mine safety. Rescue cars and trains stationed at various points throughout mining districts are to be equipped with apparatus to receive broadcasted messages in case of disaster.

The radio mania has brought in its wake numerous new professions, among the most important being that of line-up man who repairs household aerials that have become damaged.

The Radio Rendezvous, which is in process of organization, will occupy an entire floor in the Grand Central Palace, New York city. The first radio theater and the first radio dance hall ever established will be the outstanding features of the Rendezvous. The theater will seat over a thousand persons, and the dance hall will accommodate over a thousand couples.

Milltown, Ga., August 15.—(Special.)—Thirty-seven land owners of Grand Bay, which lies in Lanier and Lowndes counties, have filed with the clerk of Lowndes county a petition asking for the condemnation of the drainage court to take steps to have drained the whole area known as drainage district No. 1, which is said to be second in size in the state to the famous Oklawaha swamp.

The plan is to dig a ditch six or eight miles long and about twelve feet deep. The expense will be borne by a tax levy on the land affected.

Strike Situation

Is Leading Topic

As House Meets

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, August 15.—(By Constitution Bureau Wire.)—Several Georgia congressmen were on hand at the opening session of the lower house today, following the mid-summer recess declared in July.

Representatives Vinson, Larsen, Lankford, Upshaw and Park arrived the first of the week, with the remaining members of the state delegation expected Wednesday.

With congressmen pouring in at the capitol from all sections of the country to be present when President Harding makes his address to the house, the chief topic of discussion about the corridors today was on the strike situation. Returning members stood ready to receive any recommendations the chief executive might make towards settling the industrial dispute.

Up to Government.

The general sentiment among many of the members, especially those from districts hit hardest by the strike, was that the problem was now up to the government for action, believing that the situation as it stands is deadlock. That the government should seize the railroads to protect public interest, unless the present demoralized state of the nation's transportation system can be relieved, was the opinion of many.

Members will not prone to invite political unpleasantness by assuming the lead in the matter as apparently ready and willing to follow suggestions from the president as to the best way to handle the problem. Most of them have been on the home ground and know the feeling of their local constituents. And those who have not, including members of the senate who have spent their time wrangling over the tariff, have been flooded with appeals requesting immediate relief from impending fuel shortage.

The communications addressed to members of congress have largely to do with the strike situation rather than the ordinary flow of legislative correspondence, all of which is considered a barometer of the general sentiment. There has been much evidence from agricultural sections that farmers fear the strike will interfere with the marketing of their fall crops, and a great deal of protest over the inactivity of the administration to bring about some final adjustment has developed in this line.

Not Much Work Ahead. Unless the president does outline a legislative program to deal with the strike situation, there is no indication that the house will do much work. Passage of the tariff bill will provide the conferees with several weeks' entertainment, but this will not affect the plans of the general membership, who plan to arrange further recesses, it is said.

Democratic members are scheduled to attempt a coup on the Muscle Shoals project, but on prophecy is permissible in this connection until it is learned just what President Harding will have to say about the strike. It was the agreement of the house at the beginning of the six weeks' recess that the ship subsidy bill be taken up when the body reconvened. President Harding, it is said, is still planning then to force it through the senate before adjournment, but little sentiment in favor of this action was manifested by the returning statesmen today. In fact, the legislative program will remain up in the air until something definite is learned of the white house recommendations concerning the industrial problem, scheduled to come within the next 48 hours.

House Applauds Upshaw Arrival on Job Tuesday

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, August 15.—(By Constitution Bureau Wire.)—When Congressman W. D. Upshaw, of Atlanta, stepped upon the floor of the house at noon today, when body reconvened after a month's recess, there was a hearty ovation given to him in which many republicans joined the almost solid democratic side.

Minority Leader Gerard had wired all democrats to be present, and when the gong rang today the 5th district congressman was among the greatly reduced number to answer roll call, despite the fact that Upshaw is opposed for re-election by the mayor of Atlanta and others, and left the heat of the campaign, with the primary less than a month off, to answer to the call of duty here.

It was the knowledge of these facts that caused his colleagues in the house, with whom he is popular, to loudly applaud him upon his entry.

AT WOMAN'S WINDOW

BY W. L. GEORGE

I wonder if you find yourself in the pleasant situation of having today much more money than you had the day before? If so, I congratulate you and wish you all the happiness your fortune can give you, but at the same time I console you with a little on the difficulties thus laid on your innocent head. The woman whose husband has just made a great deal of money, or who has inherited a fortune, has some definite problems to face. Some of her friends and nearly all her relatives are very much annoyed; it is not exactly envy, for they, too, may be well off; it is the feeling that Millicent, the one to be under, is now equal, which is rather an unpleasant idea, since we all want to be each other's boss. At the same time some financial equals who used to be casual suddenly become enthusiastic. They think that everything you say and do is perfect. It is very nice. One rather crows over people one now eclipses, even though one suspects a little the adoration of those who think one so charming. So far so good, but the real problem is with one's more intimate friends. It is so easy for money to make a difference. Those who really care for one are a little embarrassed; if they are delicate-minded they so much dislike the idea of toadying that they avoid you; if one pursues them they think one wants to exhibit one's wealth. The only way to handle such a situation is to live as much as one can as one lived before. Also one may realize one's dreams and admit into the fairy region those for whom one cares. A good way is never to mention one's money, never to assume publicly that one can now do what formerly one could not afford. Thus one may be forgiven, perhaps.

HOW TO SAVE WHEN SHOPPING

By Ruth Leigh

Author of "The Human Side of Retail Selling," "The A B C of Retailing," Etc.

There are a number of important tests you should watch out for. First, you want to know if it has a good cutting edge. Here is the way to test it—the same way used by the factories. Cut through a number of layers of thick material, flannel preferably, the thickness according to the kind and size of the scissors or shears you are testing. If a single thread catches on to the blade, discard the pair of scissors, as they have not a good cutting edge.

Then, you want to tell if your scissors are properly adjusted. Hold them to the light so that you can see between the two blades. If the pair is perfectly adjusted, you will find that the blades touch only at the points and at the bearings where the screw is inserted. Between these two points you will find an open space which is widest about the middle of the scissors or the shears. This space varies in width according to the pair you are examining.

Next, you want to know if you are getting a good steel. To distinguish between a forged steel and a steel-laid pair of scissors, look carefully at the outside of an inch from the cutting edge. If you find tiny dots or marks cut in the steel, you may know you are getting a laid-steel scissors. The dots or imperfections show where the steel blade and the frame were joined. Cheaper scissors, like cast iron or cast steel, usually have a rivet to hold the blades together, while in all high-grade scissors, the blades are held together by a screw.

It is one thing to buy good scissors—and another to buy the right pair for the right use. Tomorrow we will have a chat on different kinds of scissors to use for various purposes.

She was first vice regent of the chapter.

Mrs. Christian H. Clarke was unanimously elected regent of the Joseph Habersham chapter, D. A. R., at the regular meeting held Tuesday afternoon at Habersham Memorial hall. DRESS BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

Mrs. Castle's Indian Turban, Worn When She Entranced While She Danced at Pre-Catalan, Promises to Be as Popular as Her Forchard Bandeau and Bobbed Hair in Pre-war Days.

Paris.—Whether it was the visit of the Prince of Wales to India, or the dancing of Irene Castle in the Bois, which is responsible for the prestige of the immense colored velvet turban, no one knows or cares. It's here. Very much here. Castle, and put as many aigrettes on it as a Maharajah puts pearls. Her delicate cut face was emphasized by its size and glory. It was almost as big as the turban. She really looked better when she bobbed her hair and ran a fillet across her brow. But she started a new fashion. And that's glory enough for a dancer.

Since that day in spring the Indian turban has come into full possession of smart millinery. Lewis is just the man to delight in such Oriental gorgeousness. He has put such hats on the heads of Gaby and Mistinguett, but he has not expected them to be worn by the women on this side of the footlights. Now he has pleased both social sets.

Later in the season this type of hat may have gone over the top and down the other side, but while it is in its ascendancy, it is well to regard it with due consideration. The main reason for this feeling toward it lies in the fact that it will influence most hats during the winter.

Whenever a definite and sensational fashion comes into existence, its wide acceptance is not so important as the ideas it puts into designers' minds. They may not exactly copy the original things, but they throw their work in its direction. This is just what will happen with the Indian turban. Crowns will grow enormous, drapery will grow more pronounced.

The sketch shows a turban of actual Oriental splendor, because it is white after the Indian manner. The fabric is heavy silk embroidered in pearls and brilliant stones. The difference between the French and the Indian being that the gems are real in one, of stupendous value, and imitation in the other.

The aigrettes are omitted from the shape as it is intended to be worn in the house, for dinner at a restaurant, or for supper with dancing. The strings of pearls which drop to the waist from each temple are as graceful as the plumes. The majority of these turbans will be made and worn without any ornament.

Their size will not be decreased as the season goes on, but it is not possible to be theatrical in public and remain well dressed, so the milliners, especially the American ones, will reduce the size to its proper or suitable proportion. The small ones will be too close kin to the Russian ones that have preceded these for any enthusiasm to be shown them.

Ornate turbans will be of deep wine-red crepe de chine as well as silk and covered with the kind of embroidery that seems to engross the needle workers over here, a close Oriental design often intersected with flowers or bits of colored glass.

There are other Indian turbans launched for the Deauville racing season which are made of gold or silver cloth studded with bits of colored glass worked over with colored silks. There are not too many of them. The effect is simple and permits them to be worn with the more formal kind of sports clothes.

These turbans are not draped, nor are they unusually high. Their Indian appearance is given by the workmanship. Some of them are completely covered with a thick scroll design done in gold threads. Over this are bits of jade, oblong in shape, or pieces of ruby glass. Juniper boughs showing this elaborate workmanship, reminiscent of the Delhi bazaars, are made by Alex. Le Breton. Their foundation is of black silk jersey, a waistcoat front outlined with bands of bright green crepe and embroidered in several colors with glass enclosed within the rounded panel.

OLD-FASHION WAYS OF PRESERVING THE PLUM.

To Preserve Plums Without the Skins.

Four boiling water over large egg or marmalade bonnet plums, cover them until it is cold, then pull off the skins. Make a syrup of a pound of sugar and a teaspoon of water for each pound of fruit, make it boiling hot, and pour it over; let them remain for a day or two, then drain it off and boil again; skim it clear and pour it hot over plums; let them remain until the next day, then put them over the fire in the syrup, boil them very gently until clear; take them from the syrup with a skimmer into the pots or jars; boil a syrup until rich and thick, take off any scum which may rise, then let it cool and settle, and pour it over the plums.

To Preserve Purple Plums.

Make a syrup when perfectly clear and boiling hot, pour it over the plums, having picked out all unwanted ones, and stems; let them remain in the syrup two days, then drain it off; make it boiling hot, skim it and pour it over again; let them remain another day or two, then put them in a preserving kettle over the fire and simmer gently until the skins are tender.

Pickled Plums.

To seven pounds plums, four pounds sugar, two ounces stick cinnamon, two ounces cloves, one quart vinegar, add a little mace; put in the jar first a layer of plums, then a layer of spices alternately; scald the vinegar and put together, pour it over the plums repeat three times; the fourth time scald all together, put them into glass jars, and they are ready for use.

Salted Plums.

Make a syrup, allowing one pound of sugar to one of plums, and to every three pounds of sugar a scant pint of vinegar. Allow one ounce each of ground cinnamon cloves, nutmeg, and allspice to a rock of plums. Pick the plums. Add the spices to the syrup, and pour boiling, over the plums. Let these stand three days; then skim them out, and boil down the syrup of which is quite thick, and pour hot over the plums in the jar in which they are to be kept. Cover closely. The Constitution's Novel-a-Week
The Grand Babylon Hotel

BY ARNOLD BENNETT

Next Week, "Hills of Han"

By Samuel Merwin

Racksole said never a word. He was too disgusted with himself to speak. He clenched his fists, and put his teeth together, and held his breath. In the silence he could hear the dwindling sound of Rocco's footsteps on the thick carpet.

The next morning the guests of the Grand Babylon Hotel were aroused by a rumor that by some accident the millionaire proprietor of the hotel had remained all night locked up in the lift. It was also stated that Rocco had quarreled with his new master and incontinently left the place. As for Racksole, he sent a message for the detective in charge of the Dimmock affair, and bravely told him the happenings of the previous night. The narration was a decided ordeal to a man of Racksole's temperament. "A strange story," commented Detective Marshall, and he could not avoid a smile. "The climax was unfortunate, but you have certainly got some valuable facts."

Racksole said nothing. "I myself have a clue," added the detective. "When your message arrived I was just coming up to see you. I want you to accompany me to a certain spot not far from here. Will you come, now, at once?" "With pleasure," said Racksole. At that moment a page entered with a telegram. Racksole opened it and read: "Please come instantly. Nella. Hotel Wellington, Ostend." He looked at his watch. "I can't come," he said to the detective. "I'm going to Ostend."

"To Ostend?"

"Yes, now."

"But, really, Mr. Racksole," protested the detective. "My business is urgent."

"So's mine," said Racksole. In ten minutes he was on his way to Victoria Station.

CHAP. VII.—The Red Hat.

We must now return to Nella Racksole and Prince Aribert of Posen on board the yacht. Jules, otherwise Tom Jackson, addressed his eyes and gazed vacantly around. At length he caught sight of the prince, who approached him with a revolver well in view. "It's you, is it?" he murmured faintly.

"See here," replied the prince, "I don't want to have any arguments, but this yacht must return to Ostend at once, where you will be given up to the authorities."

"Really?" snarled Mr. Tom Jackson. Then he called out in French to the man at the wheel, "Hi, Andre, let these two be put off in the dinghy." It was a peculiar situation. Certain of nothing but the possession of the revolver, the prince scarcely knew whether to carry the argument further, and with stronger meaning, or to accept the situation with as much dignity as the circumstances would permit.

"Let us take the dinghy," said Nella; "we can row ashore in an hour." He felt that she was right. What else could be done? The prince and Nella constituted one party, on the vessel; they knew their own strength, but they did not know the strength of their opponents. "We will take the dinghy," said the prince quickly. A bell rang below and a sailor and a negro boy appeared on the deck. The yacht stopped. The dinghy was lowered. As the prince and Nella prepared to descend into the little cock-boat Mr. Tom Jackson addressed Nella. "Goodbye," he said, "I shall see you again, never fear."

In another moment they were in the dinghy, and the dinghy was drifting. The yacht's screw churned the water, and the beautiful vessel slipped away from them. The sea was utterly calm and blue in the morning sun.

"I suppose Jules was too surprised and too feeble to inquire how I came to be on board his yacht," said the prince, taking the oars.

"Oh! How did you?" asked Nella, her face lighting up.

"It happened that I saw you last night in your carriage," he said. "The fact is, I had not had the audacity to go to Berlin with my story. I stopped in Ostend to see whether I could do a little detective work on my own account. It was a piece of good luck that I saw you. I followed the carriage as quickly as I could, and I just caught a glimpse of you as you entered that awful house. There is an entrance to it at the back, from a narrow lane, I made my way there. I got into the yard at the back, and I stood under the window of the room where you had the interview with Miss Spencer. I heard everything that was said. I felt you needed no assistance from me. And then she cheated you with a trick, and the revolver came flying through the window. I picked it up. I thought it would probably be useful. There was a silence. I did not guess at first that you had fainted. I thought that you had escaped. When I found out the truth it was too late for me to intervene. There were two men, both desperate, besides Miss Spencer. It was dark. They drove away with you to the harbor. Again I followed. I saw them carry you on board. Before the yacht left the dock I managed to climb unobserved into the dinghy. I think you know the rest."

At length the dinghy passed between the stone jetties of Ostend harbor. The prince moved to the nearest steps, tied up the boat and they landed. At the Hotel Wellington the prince told the doorman that they had come by the early train from Bruges, and wanted breakfast at once.

"There is one thing, prince, that we have just got to settle straight off," said Theodore Racksole. They were all three seated. Racksole, his daughter and Prince Aribert—round a dinner table in a private room at the Hotel Wellington. "We have got to settle whether we shall tell the police at once all that has occurred, or whether we shall proceed on our own responsibility."

"Do you not think we might investigate a little further," said the prince. "If we fail to accomplish anything, there would still be ample opportunity to consult the police."

"How do you suggest we should begin?" asked Racksole. "Well, there is the house which Miss Racksole entered last evening. You and I, Mr. Racksole, might examine that abode in detail."

"Tonight?"

"Certainly. We might do something."

"Racksole demurred and Nella, thoroughly fired, on his suggestion, departed for bed."

"Now," said Racksole, suddenly, changing his tone, "I fancy that after all I'm your man for a little amateur investigation tonight. But I was anxious to keep Nella out of harm's way. Let us come to business. Am I right in assuming that you have a reason for keeping the police out of this business?"

"Yes," said the prince, and his brow clouded. "I am very much afraid that my poor nephew has involved himself in some scrape that he would wish not to be divulged. Some years ago he had an affair with a feminine star of the Berlin stage. I had thought that it was quite at an end, since my nephew's betrothal to Princess Anna of Eckstein-Schwartzburg is shortly to be announced. But yesterday I saw the lady to whom I have referred driving on the Digue. The coincidence of her presence here with my nephew's disappearance is too extraordinary to be disregarded."

"But how does this theory square with the murder of Reginald Dimmock?"

"It does not square with it. My idea is that the murder of poor Dimmock and the disappearance of my nephew are entirely unconnected. Unless, indeed, this Berlin actress is playing into the hands of the murderers. I had not thought of that."

"What do you propose to do tonight?"

"I propose to enter the house which Miss Racksole entered last night and to find out something definite."

"I concur," said Racksole. "But I would wager a hundred thousand dollars that Prince Eugen has been kidnapped. Then he told him all he had learnt from Mr. Sampson Levi, and followed it with the question: 'Has any previous application ever been made for the hand of the Princess Anna?'"

"Yes. Last year, the King of Bosnia sued for it, but his proposal was declined."

"Why?"

"Because my nephew was considered to be a more suitable match for her."

"Then, if for any reason the marriage of Princess Anna with my nephew was frustrated, the King of Bosnia would have a fair chance in that quarter."

"He would. The political aspect of things would be perfectly satisfactory."

"Thanks!" said Racksole. "I will wager another hundred thousand dollars that someone in Bosnia doesn't accuse the king himself—is at the bottom of this business. Let us go."

"Where?"

"To this precious house of Nella's adventure."

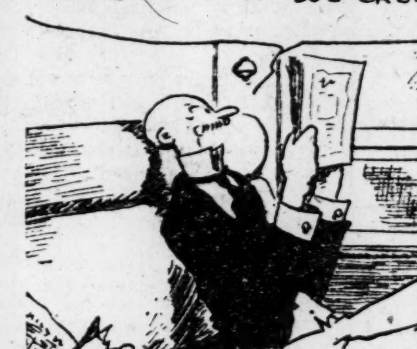

"But surely it is too early?"

"So it is," said Racksole. "Let us go and see the gambling. We must encounter the Berlin lady. The suggestion was not made seriously, but it appeared to both men that they might do some good in the intervening time in the gorgeous saloon of the Kursaal, where, in the season, as much money is won and lost as at Monte Carlo."

It was striking 10 o'clock as they entered the rooms. There was a large company present—a company which included some of the most notorious persons in Europe. For some time they watched the roulette play at the table which happened to be nearest to them. At another table nearby was a considerable air of excitement. In the forefront of the players was a woman in a low-cut evening dress of black silk, and a large red picture-hat. She was the center of attraction. People

Racksole boldly pushed the French window a little wider open, and put his "me" to the aperture.

"Then you refuse?" Miss Spencer's visitor was saying. "Not even a thousand francs? I tell you I've lost the whole twenty-five thousand."

"Then I'll tell the whole story," the lady went on in an angry rush of words. "I did what I promised to do. I entered him here, and you got him safe in your vile cellar, poor little man, and you won't give me a paltry thousand francs."

"You have already had your price," the words were Miss Spencer's.

"I haven't it."

"Then we'll see."

Prince Aribert heard a rustle of flying skirts. A door banged. He pushed the window wide open. The room was in darkness, and apparently empty.

"Now for that lantern of yours," he said eagerly.

Racksole produced a dark lantern from the capacious pocket of his dust-coat, and lighted it. The ray flashed about the ground.

"What is that?" exclaimed Prince Aribert with a swift cry, pointing to the ground. The lantern threw its light on a perpendicular grating at their feet, through which could be young man in the cellar feebly raised his head and stared up at the grating. He gazed in an aimless, silly manner for a few seconds, his eyes blinking under the glare of the lantern, and then his head slowly drooped again to his chest.

"Come," Aribert almost shouted, and, snatching the lantern from Racksole, he rushed into the dark room where they had heard the conversation of Miss Spencer and the lady in the red hat. On the mantelpiece were a couple of candles which had been blown out, and in a mechanical, unthinking way Racksole lighted them. Thrown over a chair was a man's evening dress jacket. The next moment they were out in the passage which led to the front door of the house. This door stood open. They looked into the street, up and down, but there was not a soul in sight.

The cellar steps were not difficult to discover. The lantern showed that they were in a curve. Silently Racksole resumed possession of the lantern, and went first, the prince close behind him. At the foot was a short passage, and in this passage crouched the figure of a woman. As the men went nearer they saw that it was Miss Spencer who barred their way. In one hand she held a rather long broadsword.

"I heard you, I heard you!" she exclaimed. "Get back. You mustn't come here. There was a desperate and dangerous look on her face."

"Now, see here, Miss Spencer," Racksole said calmly. "You'd better get up and clear out, or we'll just have to drag you off."

He went on to her, the lantern in his hand. Without another word she struck the knife into his arm. Racksole positively laughed. The idea of this woman, this bureau clerk, stopping his progress aroused his sense of humor. He began to take off his light overcoat. "I see I must take my coat off to you," he said.

Then, with a quick movement, he threw the coat over Miss Spencer's head, seizing both her arms, while Prince Aribert assisted. They carried her, unresisting, to the upper floor, where they looked her in a bedroom. Having looked the front door, and the French window of the sitting-room, they proceeded again to the cellar. The cellar door was, of course, locked, but with their united efforts they broke it down.

The captive still sat on his chair. The terrific noise and bustle of breaking down the door seemed not to have aroused him from his lethargy, but great deal. Come and have supper, Eugen."

"I won't," answered Eugen doggedly. "I'm waiting here for her. She said she'd come."

"Who is she?" Aribert asked, humoring him.

"She? You mustn't ask. Don't pry, Uncle Aribert. She was wearing a red hat."

"I'll take you to her, my dear Eugen," Prince Aribert put his hand on the other's shoulder, but Eugen shook him off violently, stood up, and then sat down again. His face was flushed, and Racksole observed that the left pupil was more dilated than the right. The man stared, muttered odd, fragmentary scraps of sentences, now grumbling, now winning.

"We had better get him upstairs, somehow," said Racksole.

"Yes," Aribert assented. "Eugen, the lady with the red hat, the lady you are waiting for, is upstairs. She has sent us down to ask you to come up."

"Himself!" the poor fellow exclaimed, with a kind of weak anger. "Why did you not say this before?"

He rose, staggered towards Aribert, and fell headlong on the floor. He had swooned. The two men raised him, carried him up the stone steps, and laid him with infinite care on a sofa.

"One of us must fetch a doctor," said Prince Aribert.

"I will," said Racksole. At that moment there was a quick, curt rap

Barons Take Two-Game Series From Crackers

Red McDermott Playing Good Ball for Locals; Barons Win Last Game, 10-1

Sammy Mayer Comes In From Outfield to Hurl Last Sessions and Red McDermott Does the Receiving.

Birmingham, Ala., August 15.—(Special.)—The Atlanta Crackers, sorely battered and buffeted about by the Birmingham Barons, who got sweet revenge for the lambasting that the Crackers handed them earlier in the season, lost the second and final game of the two-game series yesterday afternoon, by the score of 10 to 1. Losing this game started them back home, barely a game out of the cellar position.

The Crackers open a series tomorrow afternoon in Atlanta with the Lookouts from Chattanooga and the defeat on the opening day will throw the Crackers into the cellar.

The game this afternoon was featured by the hitting of the Barons, who lambasted the offerings of the Crackers' hurlers to all corners of the lot. "Red" McDermott, for the visitors, played a great game this afternoon in a new position. He looks to be a real ball player and should make the Crackers a valuable man.

STOCK TRAINING MORE ACTIVE AFTER SHARP DROP

Rail Heads' Strong Stand Creates Better Feeling Among Market Groups

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE TRANSACTIONS

AS RECEIVED BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, THE CONSTITUTION LEASED WIRE AND THE NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE LEASED WIRE OF DOREMUS-DANIEL & CO., INC. 9 TRUST CO. OF CAL. BLDG., HERBERT H. BROWN, MANAGER, MEMBERS NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

THE CONSTITUTION, ATLANTA, GA., WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 16, 1922. PAGE THIRTEEN

BY R. L. BARNUM
Constitution's Financial Correspondent.

New York, August 15.—The action of the stock market today indicated that the sharp drop in the last hour of trading on Monday was due entirely to the activity of professional traders who saw an opportunity in successful in their operations to attack the market for a turn. They were got away with a profit in view of the fact that the rise in the early dealings today was brought about on very few transactions. When the better grade of rails and industrials got to around yesterday's high levels, trading became more active as a result of buying for the short account of the news coming to hand in connection with the coal and railroad strike which report improvement in some sections and worse conditions in others. In spite of the news, however, it is generally believed here that progress has been made since last Thursday in bringing about an agreement in this industry. In the railroad situation the outlook is more ambiguous. But despite it all, favorable developments are expected. Presto indicate that he will take a firm stand in his expected message to today's cabinet meeting. The stand to be taken will be decided on an agreement in this industry. The decision is keenly awaited here.

Another development which is considered favorable is the attitude of railroad executives who display a desire to fight the "battle" to the end, indicating that they must have the situation well in hand in most places. Their attitude to the non-striking unions is considered a good sign inasmuch as they demand the Big Four make known their position here and there. Abandonment of trains in the west is severely criticized here and is believed to be costing the unions many friends.

Crucible Steel Active.

Crucible steel was again an active stock feature on the local exchange. The stock moved upward to a new high record for the movement. Buying, according to floor traders, is in connection with rumors of pending favorable developments. Directors of the company meet tomorrow to take action on the preferred dividend not due for another month, but it is understood that some action may be taken after tomorrow's meeting of a resumption of dividends on the common stock. This, in some quarters, will be looked upon as an effort to boost the common stock above $100 in order that the company may sell new stock at that price. It is understood that the proposed stock offering has been withdrawn by local bankers.

Tobacco products also were active and higher.

Sears-Roebuck will not retire all of its notes on October 1, as previously announced. The change in plans is due to desire of directors to conserve cash resources pending settlement of the litigation on October 1, this year, will be taken in by the company.

Earnings Favorable.

Numerous industrial and mercantile companies issued earnings statements today. In many instances the figures reported show a favorable comparison with a year ago. The Stewart-Warner Speedometer company reports net profits of $1,850,523 for the 6 months ending June 30, equal, after all charges, to $1.91 a share on the outstanding stock.

In the same period last year the company reported net profits of $852,873 after the same deductions, which was equal to $1.38 a share on the same amount of stock. The United Paper Board reported for the year ended May 27, 1922, reports a profit of $481,555 against a surplus of $1,220 in the previous year.

J. C. Penney company reports gross sales of $3,202,137 for July, a reduction of $87,859, as compared with a similar period last year. The Schulte Retail Store corporation reports gross sales of $2,838,729 in the same month, an increase of $228,093 in 1921.

The meeting of the Pierce Oil corporation, scheduled for July 15 at Richmond, was postponed until September 12, without taking any action. The financial position of the company is being criticized in some sections while at the same time the improvement is expressed in the company's official family.

While there is no sensational demand for copper metal on the market at the present time, producers are reporting a slow and steady demand, with prices continuing around 14 cents a pound. At the present time, the demand from foreign and domestic consumers is about even, but it is expected that as soon as the labor difficulties are settled in this country, a sudden demand for metal for home consumption will be witnessed.

Germany Cannot Pay Installment Due, She Pleads

Berlin, August 9.—(By the Associated Press).—The German government today addressed a note to the British, French, Italian and Belgian governments declaring that in consequence of the demand for foreign currency to pay for urgently needed necessities of life, and in consequence of the fall in the value of the mark, it could not meet the clearing house installment of 2,000,000 pounds due today in payment of pre-war debts to allied nationals.

The daily sales are a little lower than previous sales, but considering the cloudy weather handicap, the average is thought to be very good. The average of today's sales was $28.55.

Tobacco has poured into Blackshear all day long, long caravans of tobacco-laden wagons, automobiles, trucks and every other conceivable conveyance have been working their way to the warehouse since before sunrise this morning. A large number of the trucks have been shot and away because the management could not possibly handle it today.

Tobacco came from everywhere in Georgia where the bright light is green. Sixty thousand pounds came by freight from Tallapoosa county. Over 67,000 pounds were sold here yesterday.

It is thought that the rest of this week will be unusually active, as the market is just getting into full swing.

Mr. Foster declared this the most important provision in the contract and one the violation of which provides grounds for the institution of proceedings by the attorney-general to cancel the entire lease.

"Not only does Mr. Ford guarantee to manufacture fertilizer but he states that he will make 40,000 tons of nitrogen equal to one-fifth of the total annual consumption in fertilizer and he will do so with the most economical power available, continues Mr. Silver's letter.

Mr. Ford will not fulfill his contract unless he produces potash fertilizer materials, such as potash and phosphate."

SILVER ANSWERS CRITICS OF FORD SHOALS PROPOSAL

Washington, August 15.—Replying to criticism by Senator Harrell, of Oklahoma, and other members of congress that Henry Ford in his proposed contract for taking over the Muscle Shoals project does not guarantee to manufacture fertilizer, Gray Silver, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation, today wrote them calling attention to section fifteen of the Ford offer which he quotes as stating that "the manufacture, sale and distribution of commercial fertilizer constitute one of the principal considerations of this offer."

Mr. Silver declared this the most important provision in the contract and one the violation of which provides grounds for the institution of proceedings by the attorney-general to cancel the entire lease.

Man in McElreath Mystery Is Indicted On Whisky Charge

Whisky charges were made in an indictment returned by the Campbell county grand jury Tuesday against Forrest Huggins, who was arrested in Campbell county last week in connection with the inquiry into the recent mysterious slaying of Homer McElreath, convict camp engineer.

W. H. Huggins, his brother, was convicted before Judge John B. Hutcheson for the alleged possession of about ten gallons of moonshine whisky for selling it to the late late Tuesday. No indictments were returned in the McElreath probe.

G.O.P. to Oppose La Follette Place In Tariff Parley

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, August 15.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—With the senate rushing the tariff bill through to final passage, a hot fight looms in view over the selection of the conferees.

Senator La Follette, one of the bitterest opponents of the Fordney-McCumber bill, is the third republican member of the finance committee, from which the conferees will be selected. Ordinarily, this would insure the Wisconsin senator a seat in the conference, but due to La Follette's severe and caustic denunciation of the schedules of the bill his selection will be fought by majority leaders, who fear his participation would upset final adjustment.

It is understood that republican leaders have already agreed to bar La Follette, who is campaigning in Wisconsin. Meanwhile, word has come to Washington that La Follette is on his way to the capital to take part in the final proceedings, and his friends believe that he will want to take part in the conference and that he will fight any move to bar him.

Other Complications.

Ahead of Senator La Follette are Senators McCumber, and Smoot, the former of whom retired as chairman next March, having been defeated in the primary of North Dakota; and it is rumored that Senator Smoot may be called to head the Mormon church, of which he is the staunch member.

This leaves the situation much deeper than may appear on the surface. It may serve as the opening of anticipated bitter fight over the chairmanship of the finance committee, to which La Follette may be entitled under the seniority rule.

Considered Dangerous.

If the Wisconsin senator is returned to the senate, and it is generally conceded that he will be, it will be only a matter of time before he will be in line for the committee chairmanship. He will be opposed by regular republicans, but still it is not known whether they will be able to defeat him.

To members of the old guard, La Follette is considered a dangerous radical, who could do much harm to the regular organization by being at the head of one of the most important legislative bodies of the country. He has taken an active part in the fight conducted by democrats against the tariff and has been one of the storm centers of the senate since 1905, when he was first elected to that body. Somewhat on the order of Borah, he can never be counted upon to support a party measure for party's sake, voting according to his individual appraisal of the legislation, and with utter disregard of republican policies.

Application for a charter for the American Wheel and Rim company, a $150,000 manufacturing corporation to be located in Atlanta, was made in Fulton superior court Tuesday by James W. Cordell, of Shelby county, Alabama, and R. H. Luckenbill, of Atlanta.

The application states that the company will engage in the manufacture of automobile wheels and rims. Mr. Cordell recently secured a patent on a new type rim for motor vehicles, and the new rim will be made at a large plant to be operated by the company in Atlanta.

EFFORT TO WRECK TRAIN FRUSTRATED

Chattanooga, Tenn., August 15.—Discovery of a section of track where the spikes had been removed from the rail frustrated an attempt to wreck a train on the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis, railroad at King's bridge, six miles south of the city this morning.

It is believed by railroad officials that the spikes were pulled before daylight as the discovery was made about 7 o'clock this morning, although not reported in the city until late this afternoon.

As soon as word reached here railroad officials and officers accompanied by bloodhounds went to the scene, but the dogs failed to strike trail.

Fired by Moonshiners.

Says Deposed Prohi

Chief of Brooks County

Albany, Ga., August 15.—(Special.) The charge that moonshiners of Brooks county conspired to get him fired is made by Captain Garnett W. Brooks, who is in the hospital in this section of Georgia until democrat heads began to fall on all sides.

Captain Saye, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, and the world made such a good reputation here that he was employed by Brooks county after his service here ended. In Albany this week, he says that while business was dull, the moonshiners absolutely "went on strike" and did not make any moonshine at all, this to make it appear, says Saye, that there was no need of a prohibition officer.

Powerful Swordfish.
